

EXERCISE 2 — THE INHERITED MAP

Identify worldview sources and beliefs

Exercise 2 — The Inherited Map

Purpose

Most of us navigate using maps we did not draw. This exercise helps you identify which parts of your worldview were given to you, and which parts you have verified through your own experience.

Investigation

List the main sources that have shaped your understanding of reality. For each source, write one belief you accepted from it.

Source	Belief I accepted from this source
Family and upbringing	[blank writing space]
Education and teachers	[blank writing space]
Religious or spiritual tradition	[blank writing space]
Books and media	[blank writing space]
Personal mentors	[blank writing space]
Other sources	[blank writing space]

Reflection

- Which source has been most influential in shaping your worldview?
- If you discovered one of these beliefs was incorrect, how would that change your understanding?
- Which belief would you most like to verify through direct experience?

Recognition

Practice

This week, when someone makes a statement presented as fact, pause and ask yourself: 'How do they know this? How do I know this? What would it take to verify it directly?'
